

Notes Complémentaires

The narrator takes the number six bus to travel from work to her home from Belhaven to fairish street.

The wood row Wilson Bridge separates the white's part of the town from the colored neighborhood.

Privileged contre under-privileged

Working class contre upper-class

Narrator is a blackmaid.

Former : ancient (ce n'est plus vrai maintenant).

Rich

Well-off

Wealthily

A cotton-picker

The text "The Other Side of the Bridge" can belong to. Idea of progress because the notion of progress implies changes and evolution, so the civil rights speak about this.

Description:

This text is an extract from The Guardian, a British Quality newspaper. It was written on April 4th 2006 and written by Julian Borger. It is entitled Civil Rights heroes.

Cartoon by Calvin Grondahl published on Standard on October 26, 2005, 2 days after Rosa Park's death at the age of 92.

This cartoon shows a bus driven by a black woman. The only passenger is a young black girl.

Cartoon:

This document is a drawing, drawn by Calvin Grondahl. It was published in April 2006, for the Guardian.

This cartoon shows a bus driven by a black woman. The only passenger is a young black girl sitting.

This cartoon is a nice honor for Rosa Park and her actions.

We can imagine that this drawing shows that the culture had changes for the black people, because the passenger and the driver are blacks. We can imagine too that the passenger tells thanks Rosa Park.