Video games

A video game is an electronic game that involves human interaction with a game pad to generate visual feedback on a screen.

Today, video games are still on arcades, computers, consoles and smart phones.

In 1951, Ralph Baer, an American engineer in the company Loral Electronics, was the first person to have the idea of a video game.

In 1952, Alexander Douglas at Cambridge university in the United Kingdom, was the first person to realize a video game in a EDSAC, an old computer, to illustrate his thesis on human-machine interactions. It is about OXO, a game of crab louse of which one of the player is controlled by the computer.

TRADITIONS IN GREAT BRITAIN AND THE U.S.A.

In America, on the fourth Thursday of November, we celebrate Thanksgiving, an old tradition to thank the Indians because they helped the pilgrims to survive. We eat turkey with salad and mashed potatoes: it is very good food!

In Ireland, on the seventeenth of March, we celebrate Saint-Patrick's day.

See you in the next issue !

Bye bye!
