6 SEPTEMBRE 2016

Finally, the Hollande-Valls government has passed its labor law using the « 49-3 » in full force. And yet, during more than 4 months, the mobilization against the « loi El Khomri » has shown the capacity of the world of work to enter into resistance against the will of this government to impose ever more precarity and deregulation. The great days of strike, the occupations of places, the demonstrations have deprived this government of its legitimacy to resort to repression without precedent and to its « 49-3 » to make it adopt its scelerate law.

And after the new massacres that took place this summer, it is without any scruple that this government, just like the right and the extreme right, has exploited the legitimate fear and the horror provoked by the attack in Nice and the assassination of Saint-Etienne-du-Rouvray.

Refusons l'état d'urgence permanent, refusons le racisme d'état

During the whole summer, the government has multiplied the racist and repressive offensives, with the help of the right, amplifying the racist and hateful campaigns against Muslims and refugees, who are in Syria and Iraq the first victims of the pretended « Islamic State ».

It has prolonged the state of emergency and all the restrictions of liberties which are linked, as if that had the least effectiveness to prevent the attacks.

It has announced the implementation of a « national guard » of 200 000 military and voluntary civilians, reinforcing the militarization of society, the circulation of weapons and the arbitrary police.

The peak has been reached when this « beautiful world » has tried to make us believe that a danger threatened France: the dress code in which some Muslim women went to the beach and were bathing. They have thus made of the « rights of man » the shame and the risk of the planet. But this state racism has nothing innocent: it sows distrust, division and hatred and it turns away attention from the real evils that suffer society.

Une seule solution : la mobilisation

During this time, the 1% who own the wealth (banks and employers) continue to impose their law. It is against them that we must take the offensive in this rentrée, on this terrain and not in the electoral farce of the presidential election which it will be possible to impose other choices, in the service of the 99% who work or would like to work.

Thursday 15 September, the intersyndical opposed to the loi El Khomri calls for a new day of strikes and demonstrations for its abrogation. Even if we know that it will be much more to make the government and employers retreat, we must seize this day of mobilization to say that we refuse not only the « labor law », but also « its world » which is more and more in crisis.

Toutes les raisons de reprendre la rue

As much as some are mobilizing already: on 31 August, the dockers blocked the port of the Havre until they obtained the liberation of two of their comrades, placed in custody the morning after, for « violence in assembly » during the national demonstration... of 14 June in Paris.

As for the victims of the repression, whether it is from the employer or the State, several emblematic cases will give the occasion to mobilize to demand the release of the workers pursued: the trial of the Air France workers on 27 September, that of the Goodyear workers on 19 October, that of the dockers of the Havre, on 25 November. Without talking about the trials that will target young people arrested during the demonstrations.

As for us, we must do everything so that the anger and the determination of the last months be heard very quickly.
