

Dear Sea,

I'm asking you not to go up. Our planet is gradually being destroyed and you are a source of vitality for me. You represent calm, pleasure and liberty. Because of climate change, some places are struggling to overcome its consequences. I don't want you to become dangerous. I want my children to go on holiday and so, explore your seas and oceans. I want them to make beautiful memories. There are so many places to discover so I don't want you to become my enemy. You cover most of our planet, so please, don't let anger get the better of you and destroy our land on your way. You are the essence of life and without you, we cannot live.

Best regards,

Marilou Bastien

Dear Sea,

I am writing to you, because we need your help. We are the Erasmus+ students, a group of explorators who are trying to understand everything about you. With this letter, we hope that you will accept us to visit you. ~~we~~ Some of us, like me, have phobias. So please be kind and help them to fight their biggest fear and show us your beauty. You are a very beautiful landscape with diversify citizens. That's why thanks to you, we are very famous for our art on coral. Moreover, travel by boat can be a different experience than by plane, because with a boat you can visit all the sea. I hope you will accept our student's demand to make us more understand you and maybe we could understand how to help you from climate change. ~~Thanks~~ Thanks to have read and maybe see you soon. ~~See~~

The Erasmus+ students who always dream of visit the world.

Dear sea,

When I come to you, I think about holidays and for sure my house even if it's not the same blue as you. Dunkirk give us the opportunity to have a safe place close to the nature. But is it a really safe place? Is it a place to be whenever and wherever? Sea, you're too dangerous. In our coasts you keep the lifes of too many migrants. Your arms are not always protective ones and some of them who try to escape to you, are caught in your trap. If I had a request for you, my safeplace would be better if it's the safeplace of everyone, in so that you have to be welcoming with everyone who try to enter in your heart. I want that this nature can be preserved, but you have to preserved mine, and our friends.

Thank you ...

Lucile ♡.

Dear sea.

You are a vast embrace that welcomes all without expectation.

Your waves reach out to everyone, no matter where they come from or who they are. You reflect the sky's many moods and colors, just as you reflect the diversity of ~~the~~ life that thrives in your depths. Every ripple, every tide, carries the stories of countless creatures who call you home, each with a voice as important as the next.

You remind us that in your boundless waters, there is room for all. We can learn from your example: that inclusion is not just about accepting others, but celebrating the richness that different perspectives bring.

When the sun dips beneath your horizon, you show us that ~~best~~ beauty can be found in the blending of colors, and strength in the unity of many drops.

So, dear sea may we be as open as you, embracing every wave and current that comes our way. May we learn from your endless depths to value all voices and flow together towards a world where everyone belongs.
